Cuba Could Strike The Spark

Every time Fidel Castro opens his mouth to rant for another two hours, every time his brother Raul swings the Communist sickle. every time Cuba's Communism becomes a little bolder, the danger of military violence in the Western Hemisphere moves closer.

How close is it now?

The question was asked of President Eisenhower in a press conference last Wednesday. He repeated what he had said beforethat the United States will not let Cuba be seized by the Communist Conspiracy and turned into a satellite government.

But if Cubans vote freely, on the other hand, to support a Communist government, the United States cannot properly object or intervene. This was an answer freighted with significance.

The President pointed out that no country ever has chosen to accept a Communist government; all Communist rule is by force, none of it chosen freely

He pointed out further that he does not believe Cubans would choose to have a Communist government.

But what he did not say in this instance spoke louder than what he said.

THERE HAS BEEN no vote in Cuba. The Castro regime, which now has been turned into a cover-up for the Communist Conspiracy, was not elected to office. It came to power by revolution and never has had its power confirmed by free choice at the polls.

The bright hopes of the Cuban revolution's friends in the United States have been blacked out by the hysterical rabble-rousing of Premier Castro against everything America has meant to Cuba, starting in the role of liberator at the turn of the century.

The bright hopes have been supplanted by the darkest fear that ever gripped the New World - the fear that Cuba might become a New World base for Russian missiles, like guns held at the head of Uncle Sam with the connivance of a once friendly neighbor.

Statement by statement, discussion by discussion, Americans are now in the process of translating their thought into policy on this vital problem of their security and the security of their neighbors.

Statement by statement, the Soviet Union is in the process of letting the New World know it intends to move into this hemisphere, with the help of Chinese Communists.

THE MONROE DOCTRINE may or may not be enforced by the Organization of American States. But the Monroe Doctrine is going to be enforced by the United States.

Cuba and Russia loomed large and ominously in the circumstances that influenced President Monroe to issue the warning against future "colonization" by European powers in 1823. It was rumored that Cuba, then a Spanish possession, might be ceded to France. It was feared that Russia was getting ready to seize territory on the Pacific coast.

Europe did not give up easily after the warning was issued. Spain annexed the Dominican Republic in 1861. France seized Mexico City in 1863. But the Dominicans, themselves, threw out the Spaniards, and France abandoned its project for a Mexican monarchy. Since then, the Monroe Doctrine has been honored.

The Future For Franklin Local

Another school merger is in the offingthis time Franklin Local District in the Summitville area, an eight-year district under pressure from the state to consolidate with a larger 12-year system.

Four That Were Prepared

In one sense, the news from Africa is like the news from our own South. The bad news drives out the good news because it's not news when human beings behave well, only when they behave badly.

On Thursday, four countries of French Equatorial Africa began to attain independence within the French Community. First was the Chad Republic. In order, the Central Africa Republic, the Congo Republic and Gabon Republic will enter their new status as independent nations.

Their prospects of success are good. They have been prepared for independence intensively for nearly two years. Civil servants have been trained. Plans have been made for the maintenance of essential services and the preservation of order.

Unlike the Belgian decision to pull out of its Congo Republic four years before the time set to give it complete independence, there is no suprise in the French withdrawal. Neither

It is inevitable that a trouble spot should make news and that untroubled spots should be passed over. But the distortion thus caused never can be passed over safely. It is more important that most southerners are coming to terms with desegregation than it is that some southerners are irreconcilable.

It is more important that four new African nations have been prepared for self-government than it is that one, which wasn't prepared, is temporarily under the control of an international riot squad furnished by the United Nations.

Peron Seeks Castro Aid

Argentina's exiled dictator, Juan Peron is said to have negotiated personally with representatives of Cuba's leftwing regime. He wants help in staging a comeback to power. The talks were conducted in Zurich during a recent visit by Peron. He left his residence in Madrid when Argentine President Frondizi arrived there. Peron's presence would have been an embarrassment to Franco, his host. Parleys between two former aides of the Argentine strongman in Havana-John William Cooke, once president of Argentina's Peronista party, and Angel Borlenghi, Person's interior minister, both exiled in Cuba-have been going on since June. Their talks were held with Ernes-"Che" Guevara, president of Cuba's national bank and also chief of the Training Command of Castro's army.

Russians Could Be Shown Truth About Mr. K

Union, but Nikita Khrushchev has virtually announced that he may come next month to the United States. This anomaly arises from the fact that the Soviet Premier implies that he is planning to attend the meeting of the United Nations General As - David Lawrence sembly in New York City. Theoretically, he wouldn't be coming officially to the United States at all. For he hasn't been invited.

The maneuver is plainly propaganda. But it could turn out to be of benefit to the free world. The opportunity could arise for demonstrations by the American people that would tell the people of Soviet Russia they need a new ruler.

They could learn that their present Premier has lost whatever influence he might have had for the cause of peace by his boorish and insulting tactics at the "summit" conference in Paris last May. As a practical matter, no American President, Republican or Democratic, will venture in the future to sit 'down with Nikita Khrushchev. He has insulted not only the President of the United States but the man who happens to have led the Allied forces that saved the Russian people from Nazi conquest in World War II. Today Khrushchev stands out as the enemy of his own people a destructive influence in world affairs that can only mean increasing hardships for the Soviet people. They have to give more and more of their labor to armament for war, thus losing the benefits of a higher standard of living.

They are deprived of their freedoms because of the Khrushchev dictatorship, which has attempted to justify such restrictions on the ground that an international emergency requires austerity and the giving up of everything, including freedom of the individual.

KHRUSHCHEV'S big blunder was his miscalculation in the field of diplomacy. He came to America in the autumn of 1959 and gave the world the impression that the critical issues between the East and West could be settled or at least be kept from involving the world in a nuclear war.

He placed emphasis on personal conference and consultations. Even many skeptics inside the United States were compelled for the moment to adopt a wait-and-disarmament commission. But this whole trend was suddenly reversed by Nikita Khrushchev, who used the U-2 incident as an excuse. The record shows that Russia has since shot down an American plane over international

If there had been no U-2 incident, what would Moscow have said if the President had refused to continue to meet with Nikita Khrushchev now because of the latest plane episode?

The fact is that, if the heads of government really desire to make settlements on any outstanding issues, disputes over the flights of reconnaissance planes need not be an obstacle But the Soviet Premier, by his attitude toward President Eisenhower, has made further conferences out of the question. Nor can Nixon or Kennedy fraternize with Khrushchev.

THE AMERICAN people not only would strongly disapprove of it but they wouldn't put any faith in Khrushchev's signature or his spoken word.

So, for all practical purposes, there can be no "entente" or basis for agreement between the East and West so long as Nikita Khrushchev is the head of the Soviet government. The sooner the Russian people come to undersand that they need a new ambassador-at-large to replace the Soviet Premier, the faster will the world be able to come to some agreement on limitation of arms and measures to prevent a nuclear war.

For today one man - Nikita Khrushchev - threatens the peace of the world, and the innocent victims inevitably would include the people of the Soviet Union. They have the power by con-

27 Pass Classes At Midland Pool

Some 27 Midland boys and girls passed the Red Cross senior and Junior lifesaving courses as classes ended Friday at the Veterans Memorial Swimming Pool, Clarence J. Grimm, Red Cross water safety instructor, announced.

Five of the senior class qualified as lifeguards. Grimm conducted the senior course and Charles A. Replane, a Red Cross water safety instructor, the junior course. Rosemarie Caffro and Robert Lewis assisted the two in giving the juniors the required water test.

Red Cross certificates will be mailed to each. Emblems to wear on swimsuits were available after the closing lecture.

Cardinals Narrow Pirates' Lead To 3 With 9-To-2 Victory

Braves Beat Giants To Tie For 3rd Place

By WHITNEY MARTIN Associated Press Sports Writer There is an old theory in baseball that the way to win a pennant is for a club to at least hold its own against its leading rivals, and knock the stuffing out of the second division clubs.

Until recently the St. Louis Cardinals had been a little negligent about the first part of that advice. They have been whopping the weaker clubs with monotonous regularity, all right. They are 12 and 7 against Cincinnati, 12 and 5 against Philadelphia, and 9 and 5 against the Cubs.

But the one leading rival they weren't holding their own with was the Pittsburgh Pirates. They have been doing all right against the Los Angeles Dodgers, with a 7 and 6 record. They are all square with Milwaukee at nine games apiece, and they are 7 and 6 with San Francisco.

When they started their current series on Thursday with the Pirates, however, they had won five and lost eight, a situation not conducive to pennant aspirations.

The Cards suddenly seem to have realized that the Bucs must be made to walk the plank if St. Louis was to have a chance at the pennant, and they are doing something about it.

Friday night they turned in their second straight victory in their five-game series with the National League leaders, 9-2, and in so doing narrowed the margin to 7 and 8. And incidentally cut Pittsburgh's lead over them to three

Milwaukee beat San Francisco 4-2 and climbed into a third place tie with Los Angeles which lost to Cincinnati 3-2. Philadelphia beat the Chicago Cubs 10-6. It was a costly victory for the Cardinals. Catcher Carl Sawatski had to have seven stitches taken in his throwing hand as the result of being hit by a foul tip, and second baseman Julian Javier was conked sliding into second. Cardinals Narrow Pirates' Lead To 3 With 9-To-2 Victory

Associated Press Sports Writer There is an old theory in baseball that the way to win a pennant is for a club to at least hold its own against its leading rivals, and knock the stuffing out of the second division clubs.

Until recently the St. Louis Cardinals had been a little negligent about the first part of that advice. They have been whopping the weaker clubs with monotonous regularity, all right. They are 12 and 7 against Cincinnati, 12 and 5 against Philadelphia, and 9 and 5 against the Cubs.

But the one leading rival they weren't holding their own with was the Pittsburgh Pirates. They have been doing all right against the Los Angeles Dodgers, with a 7 and 6 record. They are all square with Milwaukee at nine games apiece, and they are 7 and 6 with San Francisco.

When they started their current series on Thursday with the Pirates, however, they had won five and lost eight, a situation not conducive to pennant aspirations.

The Cards suddenly seem to have realized that the Bucs must be made to walk the plank if St. Louis was to have a chance at the pennant, and they are doing something about it

Friday night they turned in their second straight victory in their five-game series with the National League leaders, 9-2, and in so doing narrowed the margin to 7 and 8. And incidentally cut Pittsburgh's lead over them to three

Milwaukee beat San Francisco 4-2 and climbed into a third place tie with Los Angeles which lost to Cincinnati 3-2. Philadelphia beat the Chicago Cubs 10-6.

It was a costly victory for the Cardinals. Catcher Carl Sawatski had to have seven stitches taken in his throwing hand as the result of being hit by a foul tip, and second baseman Julian Javier was conked sliding into second. He was only stunned, but Sawatski will be lost for a week at least.

Warren Spahn tossed a six-hitter at the Giants to win for Milwaukee. It was Spahn's 280th victory of his career, and brought him within two of Anthony Mullane, who is 12th among all-time

City Man Sentenced In Delinquency Case

Robert L. Wooten, 24, of East Liverpool was found guilty of contributing to the delinquency of minors at a hearing Friday before Juvenile Judge Louis Tobin and was sentenced to 30 days in the County Jail.

Wooten and Mrs. Lena Grimm, 2006 Nevada St., Wellsville, were cited for contributing to the delinquency of her four children after they were found in a car together late in July. They were found by Wellsville police, who had been called to the Grimm home on a complaint.

Mrs. Grimm was found innocent of neglect of her children by Judge Tobin Wednesday but he ordered Asst. Prosecutor J. Warren Bettis to charge her with perjury in Common Pleas Court. Wooten will be placed on probation when he is released and was ordered not to associate with Mrs.

Blue Cross Gets 'Green Light' On Increase Of 19½%

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) - The State of Ohio is willing to let Blue Cross in southwestern Ohio jump its rates 191/2 per cent, but not the full 28 per cent it asked. Insurance Supt. Edward A. The Truth About Air Safety Today

American Husbands Are Too Domestic!

By Margaret Mead

Bob Hope Tells: My Favorite Golf Jokes

American Husbands Are Too Domestic!

A noted anthropologist laments the disappearance of the old-fashioned marriage and proposes some modern solutions

By Dr. MARGARET MEAD as told to Lester and Irene David MERICAN HUSBANDS are among the world's most A domesticated males!

It is time we realized that this situation is not as harmless as most married couples-and many authorities in the field of family relations-seem to believe.

A study conducted by the Princeton Research Service revealed that 87 percent of younger husbands and 78 percent of older ones help their wives with the children and housework. Among married college students, according to Gilbert Youth Research, the figure is just about 100 percent. Despite some rumbles of discontent, most husbands have accepted their lot and even manage to enjoy it.

Certainly this state of affairs helps insure a smoother-running home, and contributes to the American wife's reputation for an incredibly clean, well-ordered household.

But while a domesticated husband is reckoned an immediate advantage to a wife, he is an ultimate liability to himself and to the nation.

The generally accepted notion that a married man must spend a good portion of his free time helping care for home and children can stifle his ambition and hurt his career.

In fact, it has already influenced vast numbers of males to lower their sights so that they seek only job security and an adequate income, not any greater responsibilities that might keep them away from home and its chores. This has happened because we have succeeded in convincing them that they are shirking their duties as good husbands and fathers unless they pitch in valiantly at home.

But if our men are busy with the work of the home, who is left to do the work of the world? Where will our statesmen, creators, and industrial leaders come from? Government, business, and industry are already suffering from an acute shortage of good executive talent. Small wonder! The pool from which top-management material ordinarily would emerge is much too busy doing the week's shopping at the supermarket.

Wives are not entirely to blame. They, too, are victims of a way of life that has developed around them. The villain is our cultural standards!

When this century was young, an entire family would live in a large house near a husband's place of work. Help was plentiful. Often, there were grandparents or other relatives around to lend a hand. As a result, Father could devote his time to his career. He hardly knew where the kitchen utensils were kept, much less how to use them.

Now we have the era of the small home. There's no room for other relatives; they live separately. And full-time domestic help is found in less than 3 percent of our homes. The mother must rear three or four children and keep house, with all its gadgetry, by herself. The house must always be spick-and-span, the children must always look starched and shiny. The result is that she works from 80 to 100 hours a week at her job, about twoand-a-half times more than her husband does at his. She must be an expert nurse, social secretary, chauffeur, and purchasing agent, not to mention the time she has to spend in the highly organized community life of our towns.

She needs help. The only thing she can do, she thinks, is to call on her husband.

Faced with this dilemma, far too many American women have fallen into a trap. They look for a good husband instead of a superior man. To them, a "good husband" is one who puts his family above his work. They want a man to be a good provider, but they do not want him to aspire to any eminence that might prevent him from coming home on time and deprive them of their "assistant." In short, many American wives are no longer ambitious for their husbands in any way except financially and socially.

I cannot propose any sugar-pill solution to the problem. It is too deep and tangled. However, I do believe that wives and husbands with understanding can avoid the pitfalls that lead to the overdomesticated husband.

IVES SHOULD realize that you cannot judge a husband by how helpful he is. A man may rarely perform housework yet give his family a full measure of security and warmth. Another may do much but fail to give his family affection.

Not that a husband should get into the habit of relaxing before the TV set while his overburdened wife attends to everything; he should share the essential tasks. And few fathers are unaware of the fact that spending time with the children results in closer, warmer ties.

But, on the other hand, a husband also should realize that his fulfillment as a human being lies in his ability to achieve his goal in life. And his wife must realize this, too!

Wives will find it pays to ease up on their standards of household perfection. It's better to have a less tidy home than to keep a husband from where he should be heading.

Women must remember, too, that the breadwinner's job is enormously difficult and exhausting in today's highly competitive world. Thrusting a broom or baby in his hand when he comes home is hardly the way to welcome him or help him meet the challenge of his daily problems.

Marriage today is a matter of sharing, but this does not mean that all the jobs must be split down the middle, like children dividing an apple. Wives would do well to share the work by sensibly managing a home so that a man may still have his ambitions and a fair chance to fulfill them. It is the intelligent woman's job to help her mate achieve the greatness he might well be capable of attaining, and which the world needs so badly.

The Truth About Air Safety

Despite hysteria and hokum, commercial aviation is building an impressive record of

AN AIRLINER CRASHES—and from the tragedy come hysterical cries: "Why did this happen? What can be done to prevent another crash?"

Sometimes agitation by the press, Congressmen, and the general public brings great strides in airtravel safety. Sometimes it merely adds to the confusion.

At least the press has a legitimate excuse for its insistent demands for a "why?" Seldom, however, is there a fast and accurate answer available. And that is why a great deal of hokum about air safety is voiced after each serious accident.

Because investigators for the Civil Aeronautics Board usually are reluctant to speculate publicly, reporters covering a crash must turn to the most readily quotable—and highly inaccurate—sources of information available, eyewitnesses.

Most persons who witness an air crash and offer testimony on what they saw are sincere and wellmeaning. Unfortunately, many also are completely untrained in reporting the myriad things that can go wrong with an airplane.

In 1949, for example, a DC-4 airliner collided with a P-38 fighter plane flown by a Bolivian airforce pilot over Washington's National Airport in broad daylight.

Seldom has any air crash had more eyewitnesses. But when the CAB gathered the witnesses' statements, one investigator remarked sadly: "I wonder if they saw the same accident." From the various accounts, the CAB "learned" that:

- -The DC-4 banked left just before the collision.
- —The DC-4 didn't bank at all.
- It banked right, then left, then went straight.The DC-4 gunned its engines before impact.
- -The DC-4 didn't gun its engines at all, but
- -The P-38 hit the transport from below.
- -The P-38 hit the transport from above.

CAB investigators weren't surprised. They are accustomed to eyewitness discrepancies.

Unhappily, others accept these accounts at face value and come to conclusions about air crashes that are far from the true explanations. And this leads to official demands from Congress that "something must be done"—long before anyone, including the CAB, knows specifically what that "something" may involve.

Early in the summer of 1959, there were two fatal crashes of airliners caught in particularly vicious thunderstorms. Before the CAB even held hearings on the two accidents, a Congressman had demanded that the Federal Aviation Agency ban all pilots from flying "in or near" thunderstorms.

If the FAA had adopted such an order, summertime schedules would have been cut an estimated 60 percent; thunderstorms occur almost daily in hot weather, and planes fly through them in perfect safety. Such a ban would have thrown the airlines into complete chaos without contributing to air safety.

The Congressman made his demand (1) without knowing the specific cause of either crash, and (2) completely ignoring the fact that airborne radar, now installed on approximately 50 percent of the nation's commercial air fleet, has significantly reduced the thunderstorm menace.

In the two crashes mentioned, the radar on one was out of order, and the other plane was at an altitude which permitted little maneuvering out of the storm's way. The FAA's own reaction made sense. It issued a new regulation requiring virtually all passenger planes to have radar.

Seldom has there been a major airplane crash or series of crashes that have not been followed immediately by one or more Congressmen demanding an investigation of air safety. The outbreak of near-misses and mid-air collisions starting in 1956 was a good example. Subsequent hearings put the blame on just who was responsible in large part: Congress itself, for failing to heed 10-year-old pleas and warnings of the aviation industry that the CAA needed funds for vital air-traffic control improvements.

The money eventually was appropriated, but not until 189 persons had died in three collisions involving commercial airlines between 1956 and 1959.

This is not to say that all Congressional concern over air safety swings a pendulum between the hysterical and the hypocritical. It was largely pressure from lawmakers that accomplished reform after two fatal collisions involving airliners and military jets, one over Las Vegas, Nev., and the other over Brunswick, Md., in 1958. Congress burned enough Pentagon ears to force closer supervision of military training flights, and improved civil-military liaison in air-traffic control.

Congress has no monopoly on overexcited and oversimplified reactions to air crashes. It is a very human tendency to grope for a panacea, one cureall for a problem that has a thousand facets; to demand reform before it is known what needs reforming; to look for a scapegoat before all the facts are in.

Are New Safety Methods Needed?

Some air-safety curés are worth discussing if only because they are proposed so frequently, fervently, and foolishly.

There is, for example, the demand heard after so many crashes: "Why aren't airliners required to carry parachutes?"

There are logical reasons why parachutes are impractical. For one thing, no airline captain would want to be saddled with the responsibility of deciding when his customers should jump into space. How about elderly passengers? Children? Passengers with heart conditions?

There is also the fact that parachuting is a highly skilled profession requiring weeks of training. It has been estimated that if 50 parachute neophytes jumped out of a crippled airliner, it would be a miracle if as many as five escaped death or serious injury.

There is an argument that taking a chance on a chute is preferable to the certain death that would come if a plane's wing fell off. True. But in the past 30 years, there have been exactly six cases of airliners losing a wing through structural fail-

How Safe Is Flying — Really?

Any time the speedometer on your car passes 60, you are exposing your-self to a far greater chance of death or permanent injury than when you step into a scheduled airliner. And if the auto accident actually happens, the odds against survival are no better than they would be if you were sitting in an airplane seat.

It is a statistical fact that in a recent year more people were killed riding bicycles than scheduled airplanes.

It is a statistical fact that the airlines spend more money on projects directly related to safety than any other transportation industry in the world research, pilot training, and main-

From 1946 through 1958, approximately 1,300 persons died in crashes of U. S. scheduled airliners. In the same period, 427,992 Americans died in automobile accidents.

As recently as the late '30s and early '40s, most life insurance policies contained provisions that warned the insured that if he flew, his policy was ineffective during the flight. Few such provisions exist today; if they do, trips on scheduled commercial airliners are exempt.

Not too many years ago, airline pilots were included in the "hazardous occupation" category that forced them to pay stiff premiums to protect their families. Today, pilots pay no more for life insurance than grocery clerks or bank tellers.

accident-free passenger miles - with even greater advances expected in the future

ure. Add to this four other cases of structural failure that resulted from collisions. That makes 10 instances in three decades where chutes might have saved a handful of lives.

Even the "handful" is questionable; of the 10 accidents cited, three occurred at such high altitudes that passengers would not have been able to breathe if they had jumped, and one took place at such a low altitude that chutes would have failed to open in time.

Then there is the "why-don't-airliners-install-backward-facing-seats" cry that comes from a fairly sizable group of experts.

Some British airliners have been equipped with rear-facing seats for years, on the theory that the sudden deceleration of a crash throws the passenger back against the softest, energy-absorbing part of the seat instead of being tossed forward, away from the cushioning.

The Military Air Transport Service has adopted the backward-facing seats for the majority of its transports. But MATS concedes it merely hopes the arrangement is safer; it has no proof that rear-facing seats save lives.

One group in this country has done considerable work on the question—Cornell University's crashinjury research program. The gist of its verdict:

An aircraft accident in which there are survivors usually occurs at such a low rate of speed that it makes little difference whether the seats are facing backward or forward.

One aircraft manufacturer went to every aviation research group that had done work on aircraft seats and their relation to accidents—and found unanimous opposition to rear-facing seats. The manufacturer was advised that in many low-speed (or survivable) accidents, the aft-facing seats were sometimes more dangerous, not less. This was true in so-called "ground loops" or cart-wheeling, when violent deceleration threw passengers sideways instead of forward.

Yet there is a great deal that could be accomplished to increase the percentage of survivable accidents: strengthening seat anchorings, developing better emergency exits, and adopting fuel tanks that resist rupture on impact.

Learning for the Future

One CAB survey showed that nearly 100 persons died in 14 crashes that should not have been fatal to begin with. They were accidents in which fire broke out after impact with the ground; there would have been few if any fatalities if the fuel tanks had not split open and burst into flame. Yet the demands for ruptureproof gas tanks have been a whisper compared with the vociferous clamor for such items as backward-facing seats.

It is just such side-show issues that obscure both the accomplishments and the still-to-be-achieved goals of air safety. Long after the sensational headlines, long after the "something-must-be-done" demands, there are dedicated men trying to salvage lessons for the future from the tragedies of the past—and trying not to be stampeded into actions that may only compound the problems.

"Very often we have learned—and sadly—that safety is best served by resisting pressures toward the dramatic solution," says Oscar Bakke, deputy director of the CAB's bureau of safety regulations. "The avenue to safety is strewn with many a costly safety 'gimmick' whose ultimate effect was worse than the defect it was designed to cure."

Bakke cites this example: In the late '40s, airlines were plagued by several fires that broke out in inaccessible baggage compartments. The fires themselves were traced generally to serious design boners that caused two new airliner types to be grounded for major modifications. Even while the Government and the aviation industry were correcting these deficiencies, pressure mounted for better fire- and smoke-detection systems, plus fire-extinguishing systems that could douse in-flight blazes in cargo compartments.

At a great expense, the airlines hastily incorporated such systems in their equipment. The problem seemed solved until a day in June, 1948, when an airliner was cruising near Mount Carmel, Pa.

The crew was suddenly alerted to an apparent fire in a forward baggage compartment. The pilot pumped carbon dioxide, a fire-extinguishing chemical, into the suspected area. He was giving Air Traffic Control a calm account of the incident when his voice became garbled and incoherent. The plane went into a sweeping spiral and crashed, killing all aboard.

The investigation disclosed two ironies. There was no fire in the baggage compartment; the new detection system had given a false alarm. And the carbon dioxide, intended as a lifesaver, had penetrated the cockpit, incapacitating the crew until they lost control of the aircraft.

In hastily designing a fire-extinguishing system for a baggage area, the engineers unfortunately had not eliminated all possibilities that deadly carbon dioxide might get into the cockpit.

"The bitterest irony of all," Bakke notes, "was to learn that this accident alone caused three times as many fatalities as had resulted from all the baggage-compartment fires in aviation history."

All airliners now have fire-extinguishing systems which will not allow chemical fumes to enter cockpits or cabins. This was achieved after painstaking research and thorough testing—an achievement, it might be noted, that made no front pages.

Bakke himself concedes that the coverage given major accidents inevitably overshadows the space allotted the solutions and the corrections; an air crash admittedly is dramatic.

"In my opinion," the CAB top crashprober adds, "the 'fix' is the most dramatic part of the story and deserves to be accorded as much attention as the accident. Because it has not been, I believe the public has never fully appreciated the remarkable improvement in aviation safety over the last 20 years."

The Rev. Howard B. Smith c/o National Church Headquarters New York, N. Y.

Dear Howard:

I see by the papers that you gave a speech at the recent national convention. Thousands heard you, and thousands more read the newspaper account.

Maybe you don't remember me, Howard, but I've never forgotten you since the day I fell down in front of you on my roller skates.

You didn't get around to asking me for a date until three years later, of course, but you were worth waiting for. Even with your high-school freckles, I thought you were a combination of Cary Grant and Clark Gable.

All summer the four of us were together, you and I and our best friends, Mary and Bill. I always thought Mary was the prettiest girl in our class. Remember how we played tennis and danced and went to all the basketball games?

The thing I remember best of all about you, Howard, was the night you said you wanted to see me alone because you had something to ask me. All the time I was putting on my new dress and popping the popcorn, I was imagining what I'd say when you invited me to go steady. It wasn't a matter of yes or no; it was how to say yes without blushing.

So you came, Howard, in the shining armor of your gray slacks and blue shirt, and I thought you were beautiful. After you'd eaten most of the popcorn, you looked straight into my admiring eyes, and you said,

"Say, do you think I have a chance with Mary?"

I swallowed a big gulp of astonished air and then I said: "Yes, I think you do."

And you did.

So that's about all I had to say in this letter, Howard, except for one thing. I was pretty interested in the subject of the address that won you such recognition.

It was entitled "Understanding."

You should have let me write the speech.

There's a growing demand for artists in every branch of commercial art—advertising, poster work, television art, fashion art, magazine and cover illustrating, cartooning, book illustrating, greeting card design, record album covers, murals, portraiture, and other fields.

Over $10,000,000,000 is being spent this year for advertising alone—much of that for art. Millions of drawings and paintings must be made each year now by commercial artists. You can see why new talent is needed. Openings in art have increased around 50 percent in the last five years, according to a large employment agency.

Earnings are up. With a scarcity of good trained artists today, men and women in commercial art are being paid more and more highly. Even beginners in the field. Many are now earning from $150 a week to $25,000 a year and over. Some get as much as $3,500 for a single illustration.

WHAT DO DOCTORS DO FOR TENSE NERVOUS HEADACHES?

3 out of 4 recommend the ingredients in ANACIN® for headache pain

When you suffer pain from headache, neuritis or neuralgia, why not take what most doctors recommend-the ingredients in Anacin for fast relief! Here is why Anacin gives such superior pain-relief. Mere aspirin or even aspirin with buffering contains only one pain reliever. They have no special medication to relax your nervous tension. Anacin contains a number of medically proven ingredients, including special medication that not only relieves pain incredibly fast, but also relaxes tension and releases painful pressure on nerves. Anacin Tablets are safer, too. They have a smoother action and do not irritate or upset the stomach. Buy Anacin today!

Why ANACIN gives more complete PAIN-RELIEF

Most headaches are caused by tension that presses on nerves and results in headache pain. Tension headaches call for the special medication in Anacin. Unlike aspirin or buffered aspirin which contains only one pain reliever and has no special medication to relax tension—Anacin contains medication that (1) relaxes tension (2) releases pressure on nerves (3) relieves pain fast. That's why Anacin gives a better total effect—more complete pain relief.

FOR FAST, FAST, FAST RELIEF

HEN MARK TWAIN said, "Humor is the good-natured side of any truth," he must have had in mind the amateur humorist you are bound to meet sooner or later on any golf course.

Like the game itself, there are certain rules the nonprofessional storyteller must follow. Keep them in mind, and you'll be the center of any spirited golf group.

As every golfer worth his par knows, the humor usually gets going on the 19th hole. Much of it is foolproof; much of it is just foolish. For instance, take the rough jokes based on brashness and familiarity that are often bright excuses for insults. Unless you are awfully good at this kind of humor, forget it.

Someone once said that it's no accident that the games men love are played by hitting something with a club, and are interesting because they present a matched contest, which is really a sublimated fight. This is too often true. Try and remember that camaraderie based on gamesmanship does not necessarily mean a free rein on insults disguised in jest.

Wit at the expense of another's way of playing, when it is personal, is usually cruel. Even if the victim has a quick comeback and seems to take the verbal rapier with a happy grin, don't rely on his being impervious to the wound. You wouldn't compete with a guy on the course until you sized him up. It's the same principle—don't tee off a round of jokes until you size up your audience and know their limits.

The art of amusing others may be pleasantly harmless, but it can be a tough job. It's true that people love a good laugh, and a sense of humor can save almost any situation from complete disaster. I'd be hard put to say when it's more appreciated than after a day of erratic putting. But, as Art Linkletter says: "Humor is a state of mind. It is also a state of digestion. Hangovers, ulcers, a bad cold, or a bit of fried fish can kill your sense of the ridiculous faster than you can tell the simplest joke."

To me, that remark provides the best basic lesson about wisecracking: whether on the golf course, in the clubhouse, or in the privacy of your own home, don't try to be funny when others are not in the mood for it!

A PART FROM the therapeutic values of golf for everyone, remember that golf also depends on your point of view—when you look at a sand trap from the tee, it looks like a few grains; when you're in it, it's Texas taking a deep breath.

It's all in the approach. Take the case of Mr. Brown, trying to stay calm before the crowd watching him at a tournament. He'd never played in a tournament before. After shading his eyes to gauge the distance ahead, calling for a change of clubs, resetting the ball on the tee, and stopping to scrape some loose earth from the driving mat, he was finally ready.

Stepping up to the ball, he swung and missed. Once again he swung and missed. At the third try, also unsuccessful, he didn't blow his top. On the contrary, he looked at the gallery with a cheerful smile and said: "Tough course, isn't it?"

Finally, like everything else, golf jokes have their place. It's hard for an enthusiast to accept, but there are a great many people who don't understand or like the sport. It's another reason to size up the crowd before you launch into a routine based solely on a view from your caddy cart.

Some classic advice on the proper place of golf is credited to Edward Cardinal Mooney, archbishop of Detroit: "If your score is over 100, you are neglecting your golf," he told a young priest. "If it falls below 90, you are neglecting your church."

Though golf is considered good medicine, few sportsmen follow the prescription. When the caddy hands them the score card, how many wave him away with: "I play for relaxation."

This is where a good comic sense comes in. There's nothing like a good punch line to relax you and release tension. Here are my favorite golf stories; judge carefully when to tell them, and you might well be the Sammy Snead of the locker room.

An up-and-coming young Hollywood actor was so proud of his game that he insisted his agent should come to the golf course just to see him play. When the agent reluctantly agreed, the actor couldn't wait to get started.

Before he teed off, however, he took his partner aside. "Please be very quiet, will you?" he said. "I want to make a great drive today. See that man standing way down there watching? That's my agent!"

His opponent took a look and frowned. "I wouldn't count on it if I were you," he said. "You can't possibly tand- expect to hit him at 250 yards."

One of my favorite golf stories is the one about the two magicians who were playing a round. The first stepped up to the tee, swung, and made a hole in one. Then the second magician stepped up and did the same thing. Silently they walked to the green and took their balls out of the cup.

Then one said to the other: "What do you say we cut out the magic stuff and play a little golf?"

The urgent voice at the other end of the telephone cried: "Doctor, please come quickly. We were in the back yard when my little boy swallowed all my golf tees!"

"I'll be right there, Mr. Mason," the doctor answered, then he added: "What are you doing in the meantime?"

"Oh," said the golfing father, "I'll just practice putting till you get here."

Censure being an integral part of a caddy's make-up, the stories about a caddy's reaction to a golfer's deficiencies are legion. Sarcasm is usually at its most biting in and around a sand trap—like this one:

After raising a small Sahara and still not getting anywhere, the young player said cheerfully: "Funny game, golf."

"It isn't meant to be." said the caddy

Yes, caddy jokes come by the bagful and what makes them interesting is that they're sometimes true. I like the one about the player who labors long and painfully at each hole until, halfway through the game, the caddy throws himself on the ground and closes his eyes.

"Tired?" asked the player solicitously.
"Not with carrying," said the caddy,

"Not with carrying," said the caddy sleepily. "Just with counting."

Complacency is the outward armor that most inferior golfers wear—a characteristic the caddy can recognize with his eyes closed. Take, for instance, the golfer who carefully tees his ball, looks away to the next green, and announces confidently: "That's good for one long drive and a putt."

Swinging the driver, he dislodges a pound of sod and moves the ball just three feet.

Small wonder then, that the caddy quickly hands him a putter and suggests: "Now for one heck of a putt!"

When it comes to women and golf, their unfaltering assurance is that if men can do it, it must be easy.

An example of this touching feminine ignorance occurred when two women approached the golf pro at one of the better country clubs.

"Would you like to sign up for some golf lessons?" he asked one of them.

"Oh, no, it's my friend here who wants to learn," was the serious reply. "I learned yesterday."

Mother happened to be the golfer in the family, and eventually her pretty teen-age daughter was persuaded to take up the game. When Father was called upon to pay for upcoming dues, he asked how Margie was doing.

"Oh, Margie's going around in less and less every week," said Mother.

"That I can understand," said Father. "But how's her score?"

In the over-all analysis of woman's place on the golf course, it would not be out of place to recall one story of player versus caddy. He had been so free with his remarks that the lady golfer couldn't stand it any longer.

At the fifth hole, she exploded: "If you don't keep your big mouth shut, you'll drive me out of my mind."

"That ain't no drive, ma'am," said the caddy. "That's a short putt."

Three queens at Anne's christening: Mary, Elizabeth, and the Queen Mother.

Princess Anne

N Monday, Aug. 15, a girl with the resounding name of Anne Elizabeth Alice Louise Windsor-Mountbatten celebrates her 10th birthday. The first decade can be an eventful one for a little girl, especially if she is a Princess of Great Britain, daughter of Queen Elizabeth II, and apple of the collective eye of 50 million Britons.

As in the past, Princess Anne will probably celebrate her big day with her mother, father, and brothers (including her new brother, Prince Andrew), at the family castle in Scotland. There may be a birthday party for a few young friends, all carefully guarded from outsiders.

Yet the public will watch their charming princess with more eagerness than ever. Queen Elizabeth, anxious to guard her children's privacy, tried to keep them from public exhibition, and most glimpses of them came through windows of limousines and trains, or at sporting events. But this year Princess Anne has appeared in public more than ever, as bridesmaid in two big weddings: those of her cousin, Lady Pamela Mountbatten, and her favorite aunt, Princess Margaret.

Next year may be even more momentous for Princess Anne. In the fall she will go to a private girl's school, the first time a British princess has departed from the tradition of governesses and tutors to mingle with nonroyal children.

To celebrate Anne's birthday, FAMILY WEEKLY presents an album showing the pretty princess through the years and showing, too, the striking resemblance she bears to her mother when she was a young princess.

Anne holds her new brother, Prince Andrew, born this year.

At two, Anne looked quite serious.

In looks and gesture, Anne resembles her mother (below).

Grows Up

As she celebrates her 10th birthday, she can look forward to an increasingly public role as the apple of the Empire's eye

Queen Elizabeth at eleven resembled Anne at age eight.

THINK ABOUT DEATH and START TO LIVE!

It is human nature to put off thoughts of death as long as we

This is especially true when our years are young, our health is good, and we're having a wonderful time.

But even in this life, the true values and real joys of living come into clear focus only when we face up to the facts of death and ask ourselves: "What does it mean?'

Once we do this, the terrifying specter of death becomes less fearsome. We see it as a teacher, cautioning us to shape our lives in a manner pleasing to God. We see it not as a Grim Reaper, robbing us of our worldly pleasures, but as the golden gateway to God's greatest of all gifts-eternal life.

There are some people, of course, who believe that after this life there is no more. The pure and the sinful, they contend, all meet the same gloomy end of eternal nothingness; there is no judgment, no punishment, no reward. But if our reason did not tell us this is wrong, we have the clearer assurance of God Himself that man shall live on earth, shall eventually meet death, that he shall be judged and, upon that judgment, shall live eternally either in joy-

This has been the teaching of the age-old Catholic Church since the time of the Apostles. It is a doctrine that compels a Catholic to think of his life in terms of his death. It sounds like a gloomy doctrine to those who dislike to face up to the facts of death and the certainty of divine judgment, but

Catholics are inspired rather than depressed

However gloomy the prospect of death may be, Catholics are constantly reminded by the Church of the importance of facing up to it instead of trying to ignore it. In the month of November each year, the thoughts of the faithful are especially directed to the special considerations of that occasion when every human being must take off on that final "flight" to God's vast unknown.

If you would like to know how to think about death, what happens after death, how to think about heaven, how the Church helps its people at death, what's the right attitude toward death as Catholics see it, write today for our free pamphlet. Which Black Circle Is Larger?

By Gladys M. Place

Answer:

Both circles are the same size. Measure them!

Bu John O. Cole

Two pie tins or paper plates, two straws, and two marbles are needed for this race. Place the tins or plates about six inches from each end of the dining-room table. Each player takes a straw and marble and stands at his end of the table. At the signal, the marble is placed on the table and blown around the opposite pie tin or plate and back, using the straw. Go around the table clockwise to stay out of each other's way. By inhaling through the straw, a player can keep his marble from rolling off the table. If a marble is blown off, that player must start again. Twice around is the game.

The missionary was proudly sailing home with an excannibal he intended to use as an example of how well he had succeeded among the savages. The pair sat down in the ship's dining lounge, and the steward asked: "Would you care to look over the menu?"

"Not me," the cannibal said in perfect English. "I would like to see the passenger list, though."

The wide-eyed blonde visited a promising young artist and asked him if he thought his talent was inherited. "It doesn't happen that way," he said. "Like El Greco-ever heard of his father?"

"No," the blonde admitted.

"Ever heard about his mother?"

She shook her blonde tresses.

"Well, that proves something, doesn't it?"

The girl shrugged. "Well, not exactly. I never heard of El Greco, either." -Frances Benson dare reveal her identity.

By CAMERON SHIPP

We started at the very beginning. Barbara was 15 when she met Chessman in 1940. The blind date was arranged by a girl friend whose name she can't remember. It was a double date, and the party of four just drove around, had a hamburger and a coke, and went home.

"He seemed shy," she said. "He never was brash with me. Hardly said anything that first date. He didn't even try to neck.

"He was 19 then, had been arrested for theft and sent to a road camp, but I didn't know this. Nobody told me.

"We had regular dates after that. He wasn't shy after he got to know you. He had lots of personality. I thought he was 'wild' but that he would settle down.

"His crowd that I began to be part of was exciting. They never told me what they were doing when I wasn't with them.

"I soon found out how conceited Caryl was. He was terribly arrogant. He had read more and knew more than the rest. When he knew you, he talked big. His father was a drifter, out of work most of the time, and his mother was a cripple in a wheel chair, so he had nothing at home. He was expelled from school for smoking all the time and for talking back when they caught him."

Why did she marry him? "I didn't know much. I was lonely. My mother died when I was 12. I was allowed to do as I pleased, come home when I pleased. My father and I got along, but I was lonely and unsupervised. I really don't know what I saw in Chessman. The main thing is, I guess, that I felt unwanted, and he paid attention to me."

THIRTY DAYS after the blind date, they ran off to Las Vegas and were married by a justice of the peace. Barbara lied about her age. They returned to Glendale to live with her father, then with Caryl's parents. She doesn't remember how they expected to support themselves. Chessman never had a job of any kind, so she had to work. She anticipated my next question.

"In that moment"

was a thief!"

I knew my husband

"I don't know whether he was guilty of those crimes or not, but I can't believe it." Barbara doesn't try to analyze Caryl Chessman psychologically. He had no peculiar habits or aggressions that she can identify except arrogance, hatred of authority, and a passion for tidiness. He became an expert typist and stenographer in high school. Unfortunately, the only use he made of his skills was to write legal briefs and four books while in prison. He was also a brilliant self-taught lawyer.

Barbara first learned that her husband was a criminal at 2 o'clock one morning when Chessman awakened her and dumped $400 in bills and silver on their bed.

"Look what I got," he exclaimed. "Good work—a gas station and two liquor stores!"

"I'd suspected for some time what he was doing," Barbara said, "but I hadn't seen it and I didn't want to believe it. I protested, but I knew it wouldn't do any good. Caryl laughed at me and fingered the money. I don't know where it went. He spent it all."

A LMOST IMMEDIATELY after that, Chessman came home late one night driving a Glendale police car. Behind him, Barbara remembers, was a Buick driven by another member of Chessman's crowd.

"Got to ditch this car." he told her. "Then he kissed me and said, 'If this thing cools off, okay. If not, I'll see you in jail!" Chessman roared off in the night. The police caught him easily. In every instance, he was a bungling criminal, as if he had planned to get caught.

It was the last time Barbara saw him, except in prison. They had lived together as man and wife only six months but remained married for four years—until 1945. It was after he fled from the model "open prison" at Chino, where convicts were on their honor, that the "Red Light Bandit" atrocities were committed for which he was eventually convicted and sent to a death cell at San Quentin in July, 1948. "I was divorced, remarried, and 1,000 miles away when that happened," Barbara Black points out. "The story that we had a daughter, now 17 years old, is not true. We never had a child." (The story goes that Chessman died without revealing the name of the real "Red Light Bandit" for fear of reprisals against his 17-year-old daughter.)

OF COURSE, I won't say there is no such daughter," Barbara said. "But Chessman would have to have been married to someone else before he married me. and the daughter would be older than 17.

"Yes, he wrote to me when he was on Death Row, sometimes twice a week. He never wrote me love letters. They were always strictly matter-of-fact. And they always had the same bragging, confident tone. My husband and I have the letters hidden away, and we'll never show them

"I can't really explain him. And I'm still not certain why I was so attracted to him. Anyhow, it all seems such a long time ago." Barbara heard the news of Chessman's death on the radio while she was at work. "He didn't try to contact me at the last. I didn't send any message, either."

The one woman Chessman appeared to love plainly can't attempt to explain him. She wants to forget about Chessman and be forgotten herself.

"Teen-age marriages may not all be wrong, but they shouldn't be hasty, without giving yourselves a chance to know each other a long time. I was allowed too much freedom. Kids need standards. There was no religious guidance. I should have gone to church, and I needed a home life and guidance. It's the same story, over and over again. I knew what he was like, but I thought I could change him. How long have girls been saying that? You can't change them. And the fellow I married turned out to be Caryl Chessman.'
